ABOUT US

Migrateful is a social enterprise and registered charity supporting asylum seekers, refugees and migrants (our chefs) on their journey to employment and integration, while building a more welcoming, better-informed public understanding of migration.

Our chefs are referred to us because they face significant barriers to employment and integration in the UK, having fled circumstances including modern-day slavery, gender-based violence, persecution and conflict. Through a training and support programme, we equip them to become cookery class teachers, building confidence, professional skills and pathways into employment. Once trained, our chefs lead cookery classes for public and corporate audiences from our dedicated schools in London and Bristol, as well as pop-up venues.

Migrateful has grown significantly since its founding in 2017. We now have an annual turnover of approximately £1.4 million, a team of 17 staff members, alongside around 50 chefs and a wider network of freelance facilitators and volunteers.

OUR IMPACT

Since 2017, we have delivered over 6,100 cookery classes with 72,200 participants; trained 141 cookery class teachers, translating into 34,000+ hours of work experience for chefs and over 66,000 hours of volunteering for the wider public. 84% of Migrateful chefs seeking employment secure work or training.

Our cookery classes also create meaningful opportunities for direct contact between refugees and migrants and the wider public. Using food as a shared experience, participants and chefs come together in a positive, collaborative environment that helps break down barriers, reduce prejudice and build understanding across differences. 45% of participants report increased knowledge about migrants' situations and 23% report warmer attitudes towards migrants:

"Our chef's personal story was really moving - the food was great but the best bit was giving us an opportunity to get a small glimpse of the realities that refugees face rather than the awful rhetoric often portrayed in the media."

PARTICIPANT, POST-CLASS SURVEY

"The day I started at Migrateful, a big light turned on in my heart. Migrateful is not just a place where people cook; it's a lighthouse for those who have lost their way in the dark. For me, it's home. The experience has completely transformed the way I see myself and my future. Before I was struggling with confidence and direction – I didn't believe in myself or my abilities. But through Migrateful, I found community and a space where I was seen, valued, and encouraged to grow - it helped me rebuild my life with purpose and joy. I now have a meaningful career that combines food, community, and creativity – something I once thought was just a dream."
