

IMPACT COORDINATOR SOUGHT FOR RESTORATION PROJECT ON REMOTE ISLAND

We are a large-scale, dynamic, & forward-thinking restoration & hospitality project in the Northwest Highlands with strong philanthropic & community commitments. The heart of our operation is on a remote & beautiful 800-acre island, where we are delivering stunning, sympathetic builds & authentic guest experiences in an area of outstanding scenery.

We run a monitoring programme to capture our social & environmental impact and effectiveness across a range of indicators & are looking for an enthusiastic, creative person to help with this work and become our Impact Coordinator. Our chief areas of charitable engagement include Education, Rural & Community Regeneration, Arts, Culture, Heritage & Science, Environmental Protection & Improvement, & Health & Wellbeing.

The purpose of this role will be the accurate measurement of the effectiveness & social value of the projects we deliver for our owning Charitable Trust. Our Impact Coordinator will work with our internal & external impact team to measure the social value of past, present & future projects, with strategic guidance and support from our leadership team, external advisers, and Trustees.

Storytelling

This role will suit a graduate with degrees, or equivalent experience, in the Social Sciences, Sustainable Development, Management or related fields. This is an opportunity for an ambitious candidate to jump straight into a well-supported role on a big project & produce well-presented, evidence-based stories about the project's impact using numbers, text, & multimedia for a variety of different audiences.

Data

We gather social value data & KPIs, & have a burgeoning collection of testimonials, feedback, & imagery. We need someone to help build & maintain our qualitative & quantitative data library. This will very much be a "doing" role, involving time spent with spreadsheets & reports, as well as time spent with the team helping them with the same. We are collating the story of the project to date for a key report in Q1 2025.

Community

Our team is diverse, driven, & comes from across the country & further afield. We have our own growing island community of staff & guests, while also being embedded in mainland life in nearby crofting townships & villages. There are opportunities for working with different teams, sailing heritage boats, hosting guests, educating school pupils, & supporting projects on the mainland.

We are looking for a capable, self-motivated individual with excellent communication skills who will thrive on a challenging project. We anticipate out-of-the-box thinking & self-presentation from the get-go. Training & development will be offered to the right candidate. The salary range for this role will be £25-£35kpa depending on experience. We will be happy to discuss flexible shift patterns & shared accommodation with the right candidate.
