Background

The Methodist Church in Britain celebrates its diversity. There are an estimated 7,000 to 10,000 members and adherents worshipping in languages other than Welsh and English in Methodist gatherings and services. The Methodist Church is one church with many languages spoken in it, and with English as a lingua franca.

There is currently a Connexional Committee, which oversees the ministries of the language diverse groups. There are eighteen different languages involved. This committee is referred to as the Fellowships and Cultural and Language Diverse Sub-Committee of the Mission Committee. It meets regularly via zoom and this year will meet twice for a residential meeting. Fellowships and Cultural and Language Diverse Sub-committee as reports to the Mission Committee. It previously reported through the Ministries Committee. The Connexional Fellowships vary in size and expressions at present there is 17 Fellowships and Cultural and Language groups across the connexion. The level of complexity of these groups varies, some are fellowships in a local church, like a class, or are a language group organised by gender or age or interest, others are already fully fledged Methodist Societies. In all cases, and in general, they are based on networks of culture and language affinities and also of specific expressions of common spiritualities.

The fellowships and language diverse congregations offer the possibility of gathering people and creating community. Shared culture and language(s) and a shared Methodist identity this in turn contributes to the diversity of Methodist Church in Britain as we work towards a growing, inclusive, evangelistic, justice seeking Church. Initially the newly formed Global Communities Sub-Committee will work alongside members of the current Fellowships and Cultural and Language Diverse Sub-committee till September 2025 when the Global Communities Sub-Committee will come into being
